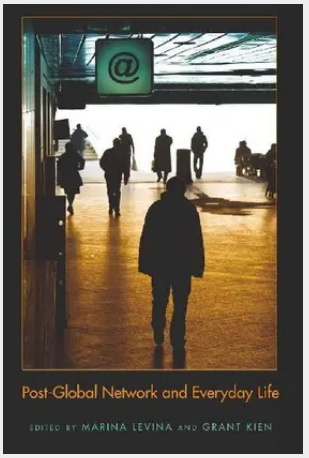
Kien / Levina

Post-Global Network and Everyday Life

Post-Global Network and Everyday Life explores everyday life in the new world order of global network. It argues that network has come into its own as a state of mind and a way of life – in sum, a cultural norm. As a result, it is no longer fitting to examine the network as an external force, but as a somewhat banal aspect of our everyday environment. The essays in this volume provide analyses of case studies that illustrate new – and old – ways in which everyday life is lived within network. Each chapter examines network as an always-already condition – we are the network, and as such are living in a state of post-global network.

Post-Global Network and Everyday Life explores everyday life in the new world order of global network. It argues that network has come into its own as a state of mind and a way of life ¿ in sum, a cultural norm. As a result, it is no longer fitting to examine the network as an external force, but as a somewhat banal aspect of our everyday environment. The essays in this volume provide analyses of case studies that illustrate new ¿ and old ¿ ways in which everyday life is lived within network. Each chapter examines network as an always-already condition ¿ we are the network, and as such are living in a state of post-global network.



40,50 €
37,85 € (zzgl. MwSt.)

Lieferfrist: bis zu 10 Tage

Artikelnummer: 9781433106989
Medium: Buch
ISBN: 978-1-4331-0698-9
Verlag: Peter Lang
Erscheinungstermin: 31.03.2010
Sprache(n): Englisch
Auflage: 1. Auflage 2010
Serie: Digital Formations
Produktform: Kartoniert
Gewicht: 300 g
Seiten: 200
Format (B x H): 150 x 225 mm