

International Contractual and Statutory Adjudication

This second edition of International Contractual and Statutory Adjudication uniquely offers a comprehensive compilation of every relevant statute, contract, or set of rules, pertaining to contractual and statutory adjudication, all in one place. When the first edition was published in 2017, its chapters covered twelve different jurisdictions worldwide, in addition to England and Wales, together with three sets of institutional rules. In the ensuing years, statutory and contractual adjudication are coming into place in several further jurisdictions, including Hong Kong, Mauritius and Thailand, which are reflected in the book with new dedicated chapters and an appendix comparing adjudication review mechanisms. The editor, together with his expert team of specialist international correspondents, reviews the available systems in each jurisdiction and also compares and contrasts such systems. The book includes all relevant legislation where available, by way of on-line zipped appendices. This book is written for legal practitioners, the judiciary, construction industry practitioners and policy makers and/or government officials, especially in jurisdictions where related legislation has either been recently published or is being planned.
