A Happy Ending for Pets

At the end of a shared journey with a pet, an owner can wish for nothing more than the opportunity for his friend to leave this world in a natural way. Sadly, the scenario in reality is often very different. Around 90% of dogs and cats are put down and merely 10% go in a more peaceful way. However, we do not have to accept this situation. The correct preparation is key in determining how our four-legged companion can change to the other side at the end of his life. This guide book provides valuable support, so that the difficult step of having to put down your pet can be prevented. It gives an insight into the personal implications of the topic and covers tips and suggestions in order to enable that initial wish. A happy-ending, not only for our pets!
