EPLP - European Patent Litigation in Practice

On June 1, 2023, the Unified Patent Court - with its local, regional and central chambers spread across Europe - began its work. The court's decisions have a binding effect for all 17 participating member states. Our new journal EPLP provides commentary and insights on decisions of the Unified Patent Court. It also covers litigation before the national European courts with cross-border implications. The aim of our journal is to provide a comprehensive overview not only of developments in major litigation hotspots, but also in other member states of the EPC and the UPC Agreement. To this end, the journal has an editorial team with members from Germany, France, Italy and the Netherlands and an advisory board with members from the other UPC member states as well as the UK. The topics covered in each issue will be addressed in a variety of formats, depending on the focus of the article: • Articles • Case Notes • Reports • Decisions EPLP offers: • an up-to-date classification of all decisions of the Unified Patent Court • an international team of authors • publications exclusively in English • a particularly practical and concise presentation The international focus allows commenting on a decision with a view from each participating member state.
