Bioelectromagnetics

Bioelectromagnetics is a globally recognized, peer-reviewed, scientific journal. It focuses on original research related to the impact of electromagnetic fields, covering a broad frequency spectrum, from static fields to terahertz radiation and visible light. The journal is interested in a wide range of content, including experimental and clinical data, as well as theoretical papers that provide fresh perspectives of concepts concerning the interaction of electromagnetic fields with biological systems. Bioelectromagnetics is edited by Dr. Theodoros Samaras and is the official journal of The BioEM Society.
