

Regulation & Governance

Regulation & Governance is the leading journal dedicated to the study of regulatory governance for academics across political science, law, psychology, criminology, sociology, organization and public management, economics and the social sciences, as well as regulators and legal experts in business and civil society. We publish interdisciplinary research on regulation, governance, and emerging associated challenges worldwide, with broad implications beyond geographic and intellectual boundaries. We publish a range of article types to communicate significant findings and novel theoretical arguments, as well as new insights and emerging directions for study. Our expert editorial board and reviewer network is committed to open and critical dialogue to refine your paper to the highest possible standard. See our Overview page to learn more.
